

Tourism, Catering and Hospitality Services (B.Sc.)

Based on an applied multidisciplinary scientific approach, the degree programme qualifies graduates for work in the fields of tourism, leisure, hospitality and/or catering services.

The programme enables graduates to plan, organise, present, document and evaluate service products for various target groups in profit and non-profit organisational settings.

Furthermore, the graduates are trained to methodologically develop their basic skills and to critically evaluate and organise cooperation between different professions. The special focus of the programme is on customer-oriented, high-quality services, which demand competences based on technology, economics, psycho-sociology, nutrition, environmental and health sciences for their optimal design.

The modules treat in particular: multi-disciplinary basic sciences for the professional field; the analysis of tourism, leisure, hospitality and/or catering services; planning of applicable multidisciplinary-based processes and products; management and organisation; practical work on projects; working conditions (sustainability, environment, health, safety, law, economics).

The key qualifications aim to deliver and promote social skills and competences, team-oriented multi-disciplinary problem solving, learning strategies and language training.
