

- M. A. Psychosocial Counseling and Mediation:

The qualification profile for the graduates covers extensive competences in analyzing individual and social problems based on scientific knowledge and in developing and applying professional social welfare practice. The following competences have to be addressed:

- Analytical skills regarding the political, social and psychological causes of social problems, conflicts and individual crises
- Analytical skills regarding the legal framework of psychosocial work
- Refined evidence-based communication skills
- Extensive skills in social diagnosis and process diagnosis
- Extensive skills in social group work, empowerment, mediation and counseling
- Skills needed to reflect on their own work and the general conditions of their work
- Research competences
- Leadership skills and controlling